WILKESBARRE CONVENTION.

WILKESBARRE, August 27.—The Democratic State Convention met in the Court room in this place, and was called to order by Samuel J. Randall, Chairman of the State Central Committee.

Dr. Andrew Nebinger was unanimously elected temporary chairman, with R. Gray Meek, of Centre, B. Brockway, of Columbia, and A. Fletcher, of Philadelphia, temporary Secretaries.

Dr. Nebinger, in a short address counselled harmony.

On the question of the adoption of the order of business as presented by Col. Wright and amended by C. W. Corrigan a debate of over an hour took place, the point in dispute being the manner in which the contested seat from Philadelphia should be disposed of. The delegation from that city claimed that they should be allowed to settle such matters among themselves, but it was finally voted that a committee of one from each Senatorial district be appointed on contested seats.

The Convention then took a recess until half-past two, awaiting the action of the Committee on Contested Seats. The seats of all the Allegheny delegates are contested, also that of Sam Josephs, of Philadelphia.

The Convention reassembled at 2:30. The Committee on Contested Seats reported Samuel Josephs entitled to represent the Third Legislative district, Dougherty the Fifth and Kendall the Second. They admitted both delegations from Allegheny, each delegation to have five votes. These delegations then named three of their number to represent them on the Committee on Permanent Organization, and pending the action of that Committee the Convention took another recess till 3:30.

At four o'clock the committee being ready to report, the Convention was called to order, and the Chairman of the committee, Colonel Robert Dechert, read the name of Hon. R. Milton Spear, for permanent Chairman.

At this point A. H. Slatz, of York, interrupted, and moved the non-concurrence of the Convention in the report of the committee so far as read, giving as his reason that Speer had, as a Member of Congress, taken "back pay." The motion and remarks of Mr. Slatz were received with great applause by a majority of the Convention.

Mr. Speer replied, defending his actions as a public man, pleading his services and fealty to the Democratic party, and asking the Convention not to give way to the personal clamor of the hour. He stated that he had not sought the honor of presiding over the Convention, but now that the committee had presented his name, he hoped he would not be stabbed in the house of his friends. R. E. Manahan and W. D. Moore supported the motion of Slatz, and denounced the salary grab in severe terms.

C. W. Corrigan, and J. Lawrence Getz spoke in behalf of Speer. The latter gentleman upheld the back pay bill and was hissed from the floor. The sense of the Convention was almost unanimously against Speer being permanent Chairman.

He was wise enough to see this and in a short speech withdrew his name and moved that the name of Dr. Audrew Nebinger be substituted. This was carried and the Committee reported a list of Vice Presidents including one from each district and a number of Secretaries.

The Convention then proceeded to nominate candidates for Judge of Supreme Court. James R. Ludlow, of Philadelphia, Jeremiah G. Thompson, of Philadelphia, James Graham, of Cumberland, Wm. Elwell, of Columbia, Henry P. Ross, of Bucks, and George Barrett, of Clearfield, were placed in nomination. The first ballot resulted as follows: Ludlow, 26; Thompson, 19; Graham, 18; Elwell, 29; Ross, 26; Barrett, 11. The names of Judges Graham and Barrett were withdrawn. The second ballot stood: Ludlow, 71; Elwell, 31; Ross, 20; and Thompson, 9; but before the result was announced, delegates commenced changing their votes to Ludlow, and his nomination was made unanimous.

F. M. Hutchinson, of Allegheny, Frederick Lauer, of Berks, Wm. P. Willis, of Perry, Edward Perks, of Center, Joseph Laubach, of Northampton, and Wm. Ryan, of Schuylkill, were in nomination. The first ballot: Hutchinson, 43; Lauer, 18; Willis, 8; Perks, 35; Daubach, 14; Ryan, 4. The names of Wm. P. Ryan and Joseph Laubach were withdrawn, and on the second ballot Hutchinson received 66 votes; Lauer, 28; and Perks 33. The nomination of F. M. Hutchinson for State Treasurer was made unanimous. The Convention took a recess at 6:30 o'clock until 8 o'clock.

The Convention reassembled at eight o'clock and adopted a series of resolutions prefaced as follows:

Resolved, That the Democratic party of Pennsylvania believing the platform of the late Democratic State Convention of Ohio is sound in principle, we do hereby resolve, (here follows the resolutions adopted by the Ohio Convention of August 6, with the exception that in the first resolution of the Ohio platform the following words are omitted: "It insists that our tariff law should be formed with a view to revenue and not to tax the community for the benefit of particular industries.")

The following additional resolution was also adopted:

Resolved, That we will no longer tamely submit to the repetition of election frauds by which the will of the people expressed at the ballot box has been subverted for some years past; and that the Democratic State Central Committee be directed to use all their efforts to prevent a repetition of these outrages on the franchises of the people; and in spite of their efforts to secure an honest election, the popular will is again fraudently overborne, to adopt such measures as will result in the certain vindication of the rights of the legal voters of this Commonwealth.

Later in the evening the Convention was addressed by Hon. Richard Vaux and Wm. H. Witter. At 11 o'clock the Convention adjourned sine die.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Rebel General Mosby's Change of Base—Improvements of the Public Buildings—The Capitol and Buildings of the Departments—Dearth of News.

Correspondence of the Radical.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 1, 1873.

General Mosby, the noted guerilla who gave our soldiers so much trouble during the war and earned great fame as the boldest of robbers, has recently come into prominence again. After the close of the war he settled down quietly in his own village of Warrenton, Virginia, to the practice of law, and for some years he was not heard of a hundred miles from his home. Last year he came out in support of President Grant and thereby won a good many encomiums from Republican writers and speakers and a considerable amount of abuse from the opposition press and stump. If reports be correct he received his reward for the services supposed to have been rendered in the last Presidential campaign, as a number of appointments of Virginians to federal offices are very generally credited to his influence. He has made himself even more famous than ever before by his proposition to support President Grant for a third term. All the talk we have recently heard about Cæserism has grown out of remarks dropped by the guerilla chief some months since, and there can be no doubt that this is where the New York Herald got its cue. Had it not been for his suggestion of a third term it is doubtful if the question would have been agitated at all, and it is quite certain the discussion would not have been raised to the white heat at which we now find it.

But the redoubtable genius is not content with his past achivements and present notoriety. Since the nominations recently made in his native State by the regular Republican and Conservative parties respectfully he has come out in the advocacy of the election of the Conservative candidates. The tone of the papers on both sides is now changed. Read Republican papers of to-day and of a year ago and you will readily note the change. So with the Democratic papers. While he has lowered himself immeasurably in Republican estimation, in Democratic eyes he is again a hero.

The most ridiculous feature about the case, however, is the complaint now being made by certain Republican journals that Mosby has acted in bad faith. For decency's sake, let him go and bid him Godspeed. I fancy all such as he are better enemies than friends. But listen to the National Republican, published in this city, and by some supposed to be a sort of an administration organ. (The reason for such a supposition I could never discover, but all the papers here get that credit.) It says: "Mosby stands to-day in default regarding certain promises made by him when he was seeking appointments for his personal friends." The Republican should not talk so in whispers. It ought to inform the public as to the nature of these promises, and it ought to tell us who the persons were to whom they were made. This is all the sheerest nonsense. In the first place I am not ready to believe that any appointments were made on the strength of promises of support from Mosby. And if such were the case I would not certainly go to whining because he had broken them. If President Grant or any Cabinet officer was so foolish as to allow himself to be humbugged by the promise of this man all I have to say is "good for him."

A stroll about the city furnishes one with some idea of the amount of work that is being done to improve and enlarge the buildings occupied by the executive and legislative branches of the government. Always first in importance comes that magnificent and massive pile, the Capitol, surmounted by the great dome. Each year more or less work is done on it to better adapt it to the purposes for which it was intended. During the present season a large number of workmen have been employed in re-arranging the coal vaults and in improving the ventilating apparatus. The ventilation of the Capitol has always been defective, and the same may be said of all the other public buildings. In the case of the Capitol it has been the source of a good deal of trouble to the architect, Mr. Clarke, and many are the plans that have been suggested, some of which have been tried and some rejected as impracticable.

The new building for the State, War and Navy Departments is constantly assuming more definite proportions. The south wing will be enclosed this fall, but it will be several years before the entire building will be completed. When finished it will be one of the finest and most imposing of all the public buildings. The outside walls are being constructed of granite. The architectural design is perfect and the workmanship of the best character. Each stone is dressed to its proper shape at the quarries and then shipped here. The sound of the hammer or chisel is not heard about the grounds at all.

The Treasury building will need renovating shortly. The old building (that fronting on Fifteenth street) was constructed of sandstone and is already beginning to crumble away. The north, south and west fronts, however, are built of granite as enduring as the hills. This building contains the largest hewn stone in the world, not excepting the pyramids of Egypt. The walls are constructed of blocks thirty-four feet four inches in height, extending from the floor of the first story to the ceiling of the third story, and five feet square. The columns are of the same dimensions, but round and fluted.

All the departments are cramped for room. About one third of the force of the Treasury Department is quartered in rented buildings in different parts of the city. In the Interior Department the Pension office has been crowded out and now occupies the old Seaton House. The Bureau of Education is quartered in a rented building. The increasing business of the Post Office Department makes more room necessary, and a proposition to add another story to the building is being discussed. It has been suggested that the present Post Office building be turned over to the Interior Department and that a new and larger one be erected for the Post Office Department.

The White House is one of the shabbiest of the public buildings, but by constant repainting, replastering and patching it is made to look pretty decent. It would perhaps be well to erect a new building in a different locality for the residence of the President and fit up the present edifice for the executive office solely. Under the present arrangement there is no such thing as privacy for the family of the President.

The government is out of town. During a part of the last week there was but one member of the cabinet in the city. The reader will not blame me, therefore, for the dearth of news. Absolutely nothing but the merest routine work has been transacted. As we remarked by the correspondent of one of the leading journals the other day, "the news we get is scarcely worth the ink we use in writing it." A rumor is in circulation that the President will return from the sea-side with his family in a couple of weeks to remain during the rest of the season. As the heated term is about at an end and as folks are returning from their summer vacations we expect better things soon, but in the matters of news no place can be worse than Washington just now.

SAM.

Reduction of the State Debt.

In all business transactions, a man is estimated and valued by the results he accomplishes, not by what is alleged against him or declared in his favor. You can abuse an official every day in the year, and still not effect his reputation, while he lays before the people, at stated periods, the evidence of his faithful performance of duty; and you may praise another man, and the public will turn a deaf ear to the fulsome endorsement, as long as he fails to present results of a practical character to show that his services are worthy of commendation. We are lead to these reflections, as we study the statements of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, that for August is appearing in this morning's issue of the State Journal. It will be seen from this the reduction of the State debt during July 1873, was $209,850. This is a large amount, but when we go back for a few years, bring up the several periodical reductions, and then aggregate them, we find that in the three years Mr. Mackey was State Treasurer the debt has been reduced $4,948,253,13. Now, it is not merely wiping out so much indebtedness, but it is escaping the semi-annual payment of large amounts of interest, itself a grievous burden to the tax payer. The public servant who accomplishes such results is of course entitled to the gratitude of the people, and therefore we point with pleasure to the officer who has done all this, as being eminently worthy of such credit. The State Treasurer is the officer thus entitled to credit. Mr. R. W. Mackey has never for an hour or a day neglected the performance of his duty as the custodian of the public funds and the guardian of the public credit. His management of our finances has been a success in every particular, as is amply proven by results like those which are presented in the debt reduction of his administration. Our securities were never nearer par than while he had charge of our finances, and our credit never better.

It is a pleasure to point to these facts, because they illustrate the integrity of Republicanism, and vindicate the faithfulness of Republican rulers. Mr. Mackey in this is a representative man of his party. He makes good its faith by his acts, and as such is deserving the continued support of the tax payers, who are profitted by his faithfulness.—State Journal.

—A special from Ebensburg to the Johnstown Tribune gives this account of the doings of the Republican County Convention of Cambria: The Republican County Convention was called to order at two o'clock this afternoon. A. M. Gregg was chosen President, and H. H. Kuhn and Alvin Evans, Secretaries. Every district in the county was represented. Hon. Samuel Henry was nominated for Assembly by acclamation. He was waited upon by a committee who informed him of the fact and he then made a brief speech thanking the Convention for honoring him for a third time as the nominee of the Republican party. John T. Harris was nominated by acclamation for Sheriff; Thomas Griffith, of Cambria township, for Treasurer; James Conrad, for County Commissioner; Tobias Stutzman, for Poor House Director; John Cushaon, for Auditor; E. V. Barker, for Jury Commissioner; John H. Fisher, for Coroner. This is the strongest ticket ever yet put up in the field in this county by the Republican party.

—The Democracy of Schuylkill county have nominated the following ticket: State Senate—Oliver P. Pechtel; Assembly—Thomas Eagan, Frederick L. Foster, Joshua Boyer; County Treasurer—Adam Waldner; County Commissioner—Patrick Conry; Director of the Poor—Wm. Stutzman; Auditor—P. O'Brien.

—Lewis B. Gunckle, member of Congress from the Fourth Ohio District, has declined to draw the increase pay.

PART II.

"You have contrived," said Charlotte, "without perhaps knowing it or wishing it, to lead the conversation altogether in my favor. The likeness of a man is quite independent; everywhere that it stands, it stands for itself, and we do not require it to mark the site of a particlar grave. But I must acknowledge to you to having a strange feeling; even to likenesses I have a kind of disinclination. Whenever I see them they seem to be silently reproaching me. They point to something far away from us—gone from us; and they remind me how difficult it is to pay right honor to the present. If we think how many people we have seen and known, and consider how little we have been to them and how little they have been to us, it is no very pleasant reflection. We have met a man of genius without having enjoyed much with him—a learned man without having learnt from him—a traveler without having been instructed—a man to love without having shown him any kindness.

"And, unhappily, this is not the case only with accidental meetings. Societies and families behave in the same way towards their dearest members, some towards their worthiest citizens, people towards their most admirable princes, nations towards their most distinguished men.

"I have heard it asked why we heard nothing but good spoken of the dead, while of the living it is never with some exception. It should be answered, because from the former we have nothing more to fear. So unreal is our anxiety to preserve the memory of others—generally no more than a mere selfish amusement; and the real, holy, earnest feeling would be what should prompt us to be more diligent and assiduous in our intentions toward those who are still left to us."

CHAPTER II.

Under the stimulus of this accident, and of the conversations which arose out of it, they went the following day to look over the burying-place, for the ornamenting of which and relieving it in some degree of its sombre look, the architect made many a happy proposal. His interest, too, had to extend itself to the church as well; a building which had caught his attention from the moment of his arrival.

It had been standing for many centuries, built in old German style, the proportions good, the decorating elaborate and excellent; and one might easily gather that the architect of the neighboring monastry had left the stamp of his art and his love on this smaller building also; it worked on the beholder with a solemnity and a sweetness, although the change in its eternal arrangements for the Protestant service, had taken from it something of its repose and majesty.

The Architect found no great difficulty in prevailing on Charlotte to give him a considerable sum of money to restore it externally and internally, in the original spirit, and thus, he as he thought, to bring it into harmony with the resurrection-field which lay in front of it. He had himself much practiced skill, and a few laborers who were still busy at the lodge, might easily be kept together, until this pious work too should be completed.

The building itself, therefore, with all its environs, and whatever was attached to it, was now carefully and thoroughly examined; and then showed itself, to the greatest surprise and delight of the architect, a little side chapel, which nobody had thought of, beautifully and delicately proportioned, and displaying still greater care and pains in its decoration. It contained at the same time many remnants, carved and painted, of the implements used in the old services, when the different festivals were distinguished by a variety of pictures and ceremonies, and each was celebrated in its own peculiar style.

It was impossible for him not at once to take this chapel into his plan; and he determined to bestow especial pains on the restoring of this little spot, as a memorial of old times, and of their taste. He saw exactly how he would like to have the vacant surfaces of the walls ornamented, and delighted himself with the prospect of exercising his talent for painting upon them; but of this, at first, he made a secret to the rest of the party.

Before doing anything else, he fulfilled his promise of showing the ladies the various imitations of, and designs from, old monuments, vases, and other such things which he had made; and when they came to speak of the simple barrow sepulchres of the northern nations, he brought a collection of weapons and implements which had been found in them. He had got them exceedingly nicely and conveniently arranged in drawers and compartments laid on boards cut to fit them, and covered over with cloth; so that these solemn old things, in the way he treated them, had a smart, dressy appearance, and it was like looking into the box of a trinket merchant.

Having once begun to show his curiosities, and finding them prove serviceable to entertain our friends in their loneliness; every evening he would produce one or other of his treasures. They were, most of them of German origin—pieces of metal, old coins, seals, and such like. All these things directed the imagination back upon old times; and when at last they came to amuse themselves with the first specimens of printing, woodcuts, and the earliest copper-plate engraving, and when the church, in the same spirit, was growing out, every day, more and more in form and color like the past, they had almost to ask themselves whether they really were living in a modern time, whether it were not a dream, that manners, customs, modes of life, and convictions were all really so changed.

After such preparation, a great portfolio, which at last he produced, had the best possible effect. It contained indeed, principally only outlines and figures, but as these had been traced upon original pictures, they retained perfectly their ancient character, and most captivating indeed this character was to the spectators. All the figures breathed only the purest feeling; every one, if not noble, at any rate was good; cheerful composure, ready recognition of One above us, to whom all reverence is due; silent devotion, in love and tranquil explanation, was expressed on every face, on every jesture. The old baldheaded man, the curly-pated boy, the light-hearted youth, the earnest man, the earnest man, the glorified saint, the angel hovering in the air, all seemed happy in an innocent, satisfied, pious expectation. The commonest object had a trait of celestial life; and every nature seemed adapted to the service of God, and to be, in some way or other, employed upon it.

Towards such a religion most of them gazed as towards a vanished golden age, or on some lost paradise; only perhaps Ottilie had a chance of finding herself among being of her own nature. Who offer any opposition when the Architect asked to be allowed to paint the space between the arches and walls of the chapel in the style of these old pictures; and thereby leave his own distinct memorial at a place where life had gone so pleasantly with him?

He spoke of it with some sadness, for he could see, in the state in which things were, that his sojourn in such delightful society could not last forever: indeed, that perhaps it would now soon be ended.

For the rest, these days were not rich in incidents; yet full of occasion for serious entertainment We therefore take the opportunity of communicating something of the remarks which Ottilie noted down among her manuscripts, to which we cannot find a fitter transition than through a similie which suggested itself to us on contemplating her exquisite pages.

This is, we are told, a curious contrivance in the service of the English marine. The ropes in use in the royal navy, from the largest to the smallest, are so twisted that a red thread runs through them from end to end, which cannot be extracted without undoing the whole: and by which the smallest pieces may be recognized as belonging to the crown.

Just so there is drawn through Ottilie's diary, a thread of attachment and affection which connects it all together, and characterizes the whole. And thus these remarks, these observations, these extracted sentences, and whatever else it may contain, were, to the writer, of peculiar meaning. Even the few separate pieces which we select and transcribe will sufficiently explain our meaning.

FROM OTTILIE'S DIARY.

"To rest hereafter at the side of those whom we love is the most delightful thought which man can have when once he looks out beyond the boundary of life. What a sweet expression is that—'He was gathered to his fathers!'"

"Of the various memorials and tokens which bring to us the distant and the separated—none is so satisfactory as a picture. To sit and talk to a beloved picture, even though it be unlike, has a charm in it, like the charm which there sometimes is in quarreling with a friend. We feel, in a strange, sweet way, that we are divided and yet cannot separate.

"We entertain ourselves often with a present person as with a picture. He need not speak to us, he need not look at us, or take any notice of us; we look at him, we feel the relation in which we stand to him; such relation can even grow without his doing anything towards it, without his having any feeling of it; he to us exactly as a picture."

"One is never satisfied with the portrait of a person that one knows. I have always felt for the portrait-painter on this account. One so seldom requires of people what is impossible and of them we do really require what is impossible; they must gather up into their picture the relation of everybody to its subject, all their likings and all dislikings; they must not only paint a man as they see him, but as everyone else sees him. It does not surprise me if such artists become by degrees stunted, but indifferent, and all of one idea; and indeed it would not matter what came of it, if it were not that in consequence we have to go without the pictures of so many persons near and dear to us."

"It is too true, the Architect's collection of weapons and old implements, which were found with the bodies of their owners, covered with great hills of earth and rock, proves to us how useless is man's so great anxiety to preserve his personality after he is dead; and so inconsistent people are! the Architect confesses to have himself opened these barrows of his forefathers, and yet goes on occupying himself with memorials of posterity."

"But after all why should we take it so much to heart? is all that we do, done for eternity? Do we not put on our dress in the morning, to throw it off again at night? Do we not go abroad to return home again? And why should we not wish to rest by the side of our friends, though it were but for a century."

"When we see the many grave-stones which have fallen in, which have been defaced by the footsteps of the congregation, which lie buried under the ruins of the churches, that have themselves crumbled together over them, we may fancy the life after death to be as a second life, into which a man enters in the figure, or the picture, or the inscription, add lives longer than when he was really alive. But this figure also, this second existence, dies out too, sooner or later. Time will not allow himself to be cheated of his rights with the monuments of men or with themselves.

CHAPTER III.

It causes us so agreeable a sensation to occupy ourselves with what we can only half do, that no person ought to find fault with the dilettante, when he is spending his time over an art which he can never learn; nor blame the artist if he chooses to pass out over the border of his own art, and amuse himself in some neighboring field. With such complacency of feeling we regard the preparation of the Architect for the painting of the chapel. The colors were got ready, the measurements taken; the cartoons designed. He made no attempt at originality, but kept close to his outlines; his only care was to make a proper distribution of the sitting and floating figures, so as to tastefully ornament his space with them.

The scaffoldings were erected. The work went forward; and as soon as anything had been done on which the eye could rest, he could have no objection to Charlotte and Ottilie coming to see how he was getting on.

The life like faces of the angels, their robes waving against the blue sky-ground, delighted the eye, while their still and holy air calmed and composed the spirit, and produced the most delicate effect.

The ladies ascended the scaffolding to him, and Ottilie had scarcely observed how easily and regularly the work was being done, than the power which had been fostered in her by her early education at once appeared to develop. She took a brush, a with a few words of direction, painted a richly folding robe, with as much delicacy as skill.

Charlotte, who was always glad when Ottilie would occupy or amuse herself with anything, left them both in the chapel, and went to follow the train of her own thoughts, and work her way for herself through her cares and anxieties which she was unable to communicate to a creature.

When ordinary men allow themselves to be worked up by common every-day difficulties into fever fits of passion, we can give them nothing but a compassionate smile. But we look with a kind of awe on the spirit in which the seed of a great destiny has been sown, which must abide the unfolding of the germ, and neither dare nor can do anything to precipitate either the good or the ill, either the happiness or the misery, which is to arise out of it.

Edward had sent an answer by Charlotte's messenger, who had come to him in his solitude. It was written with kindness and interest, but it was rather composed and serious than warm and affectionate. He had vanished almost immediately after, and Charlotte could learn no news about him; till at last she accidently found his name in the newspaper, where he was mentioned with honor among those who had most distinguished themselves in a late important engagement. She now understood the method which he had taken; she perceived that he had escaped from great danger; only she was convinced at the same time that he would seek out greater; and it was all too clear to her that in every sense he would hardly be withheld from any extremity.

She had to bear about this perpetual anxiety in her thoughts, and turn which way she would, there was no light in which she could look at it that would give her comfort.

Ottilie, never dreaming of anything of this, had taken to the work in the chapel with the greatest interest, and had easily obtained Charlotte's permission to go on with it regularly. So now all went swiftly forward, and the azure heaven was soon peopled with worthy inhabitants. By continual practice both Ottilie and the architect had gained more freedom with the last figures; they became perceptibly better. The faces, too, which had been all left to the architect to paint, showed by degrees a very singular peculiarity. They began all of them to resemble Ottilie. The neighborhood of the beautiful girl had made so strong an impression on the soul of the young man, who had no variety of faces preconceived in his mind, that by degrees, on the way from the eye to the hand, nothing was lost, and both worked in exact harmony together. Enough; one of the last faces succeeded perfectly; so that it seemed as if Ottilie herself was looking down out of spaces of the sky.

MY FIRST SPECULATION.

BY JUDGE CLARK

I can bear to tell it now, and to be laughed at about it; but there was a time when the bare mention of the name of Mucklebosh would have made me very mad.

Old Mucklebosh was a rich speculator, as ugly as sin, with a daughter as pretty as a pink.

Sweet Mary Mucklebosh!—what an artless, innocent face she had—confound her picture.

It was my friend Wesley who introduced me to her. Mr. Wesley and I had gotten acquainted accidentally, shortly after my arrival in the city, whither I had come with a few thousand left me by will, to seek my fortune.

Coming out of a saloon one evening, where an old chum and myself had been discussing our prospects and some oysters together, without regard to listeners, a familiar slap on the shoulder brought me to suddenly.

'Hello!' exclaimed a smartish looking chap in eye glasses—'Hello! Is that you Charley?'

No, it isn't, I replied, coolly, withdrawing the hand he had grasped.

'Not my old friend, Charley Rike?' said he, half incredulously.

'My name is Green—G. W. Green,' I answered, stiffly.

'Beg your pardon, Mr. Green,' said the stranger. 'I'm a little near sighted, you see, but you and Charley are as like as two peas.

He was evidently mortified at his mistake, and, to make amends for my rudeness, I asked him what he would take.

'Old rye,' he signified.

My friend and I took Bourbon.

A genial chat followed, ending in the expression of mutual wishes for better acquaintance.

At parting the gentleman requested my name and handed us his, from which we learned that his name—it must have been the result of a family compromise—was John Calvin Wesley."

Mr. Wesley and I frequently met afterward, and soon became fast friends. He made me known to his acquaintances—among others to the Muckleboshes—at least was the way I got to know Mary.

I committed rank idolatry at the first glimpse I caught of her face, and from that time on was her slave.

My visits were encouragingly received, as well by Mary as by her old fright of a father, who used to bore me with disquisitions about 'longs' and 'shorts,' and 'bulls' and 'bears' and 'corners,' whilst I was dying to hear Mary sing—

Oh, how che-ar-ming 'tis to love!"

It was in the days when the mania for bogus companies was at its height. It's an terrible belief that, had Brigham Young been here then, he would have had his wives incorporated, thereby making them legally one person, and so evading the effect of the Bigamy Act.

There was an organization, of which old Mucklebosh was president, styled the 'Independent Breeze Company,' said to be possessed of a secret process of enabling ships to furnish their own wind. The invention was already perfected, and would soon be patented. 'Now was the time,' said the circular, 'to subscribe for shares, as, in a few more days, none could be had for love or money.'

Mr. Wesley had great faith in the enterprise. He was confident the shares would go up a thousand per cent. as soon as the patent was issued. He advised me to invest my money in it. My thousands would become millions before I knew it. The rub was to get old Mucklebosh to part with any of his stock. He had taken most of it himself, and had promised the rest to a few special friends.

'Why not ask Mary to use her influence for you?' suggested Mr. Wesley, adding, with a wink, 'I'm sure she would only be too glad to do it.'

I blushed and said I couldn't think of such a thing. But I did think of it, and did speak to Mary about it, hinting delicately that I hoped that what was my interest would one day be hers.

She hung her pretty head, and said she would 'mention it to pa.'

I have no doubt she kept her word, for when I proposed to Mr. Muckelbosh to invest my all in 'Indepenent Breeze." he kindly consented to take my money and hand over the certificates, adding, with a father-in-lawish smile, that he couldn't refuse Mary anything.'

I seized the opportunity, and begged permission at once to speak my mind to his daughter.

'Do so, my son, he replied dropping his hypocritical head, and letting fall from his squinty old eyes a pair of ready made tears, which, following their natural direction, came into collusion about a foot from the end of his nose—'Do so, my son; and if Mary accepts you'—smiting himself gently under the fifth rib—you shall find a fatherly welcome here.'

I withdrew much affected.

Next day I called on Mary, resolved to unburthen my heart. I felt free to do so now. Was not my own fortune made? Why, therefore, could charge me with selfish designs upon hers?

As I entered, I met my friend, Dunn Brown—the same who was with me at my first meeting with Wesley—on the steps coming out. He looked at me defiantly and passed on. He too, I may add, through the introduction of Mr. Wesley, had become a visitor at the Muckleboshes.

When I began this story I thought I could go through it without wincing. But when I come to think of what a fool I made of myself that day—how I got upon my knees, like the stage players, and ranted worse than the worst of them—how Mary laughed in my face, and told me not to be a donkey, if I could help it—how I accused her of loving another, and swore to have his heart's blood—I'll be hanged if I tell it!—that's all.

I saw it all. Brown was my rival. His look was explained now, it was the look of triumph. But I would call him to a stern account. Oh that I was resolved. Pernicious villain! I had given him my confidence, and thus he had abused it.

Brown, I found, had left the city, and would be gone for a week. On the morning of his return I called at his lodgings, determined to have it out with him.

He sat before an untouched breakfast, glaring wildly at the morning paper.

'I have come to demand—'I began fiercely.

'Read that,' he grasped, heedless of my words.

I took the paper and read the indicated paragraph. It announced, in due form the marriage, two days before, by the Rev. Otto Goode, of Mr. John Calvin Wesley to Miss Mary Muckelbosh.

I was in the act if invoking the reverse of a blessing on the happy pair, when Brown interrupted.

'Now read that,' said he, pointing to another paragraph.

It was headed 'Stupendous fraud!' and went on to state that the 'Independent Breeze Company' had just been discovered to be the basest of swindles. That Muckelbosh and Wesley, with a few accomplices, had gotten it up, and after pocketing a snug sum by the sale of shares to those simple enough to buy, the whole party had decamped the day after the wedding chronicled in another column, the bride keeping her husband company.

'Beggard!' I exclaimed.

'I too,' groaned Brown; and to think I was ass enough actually to propose to the little minx. She had just refused me when I met you on the steps that day. Do you know, I came near knocking you down, for I took you for my rival?'

I didn't tell my own experience.

Walking Upstairs.

One day recently a respectably dressed man carried a well-grown child, muffled up and apparently sick, into French's Hotel. He placed the child on the stairs and began to talk to it in a very unkind, rough way. The attention of guests were attracted, and they gathered around.

"You are able to walk up stairs by yourself," the man said, "and I wont carry you."

"Oh, oh," the child sobbed, "do carry me up; please, pa, do. You know ever since I was run over by the car and lost both my feet I can't walk upstairs alone."

"That's all stuff," the man answered; "get up at once or I'll make you."

The poor child began to sob worse than before, and the brutal man give it a severe thump on the side of the head. The child moaned piteously. The indignation of the bystanders was excited, and one of them said to the man. "Is that child yours?"

"What's that to you?" the man answered; "I won't tell you."

"He's—my—father," the child sobbed, "and—he—killed—my—mother—just—as—he's—agoing—to—kill—me."

The man doubled his fist and made as if he was about to give the child a savage blow. One of the bystanders interfered, and said.

"Say, if you don't stop this I'll call a policeman. I never saw such a brutal father in all my life."

The man began to fumble in his pockets, and the child cried out. "Take care, he's got a knife. He's agoing to stick you."

Sure enough the man produced a knife and opened it. The crowd slipped off one by one, except two.

"Bring an officer," one of these cried to a friend.

"If I am to be arrested," the man said, "it shall be for something," and thereupon he plunged the knife into the body of the child. The child shrieked, "I'm murdered. I'm murdered," and a crowd rushed to the spot. The man quitely raised the child in his arms, and removing his hat, said:

"Gentlemen, this is a wooden child. I'm a ventriloquist, and any little offering you may be pleased to make will be very acceptable.—N. Y. Sun.

Invisibility of Perfume.

No one has yet been able to analyze or demonstrate the essential action of perfume. Gas can be weighed, but not scents; the smallest known creature—the very monads of life—can be caught by microscopic lens and made to deliver up the secrets of their organization, but what is it that emanates from the pouch of the musk deer that fills a whole space for years and years with its penetrating odor—an odor which an illimitable number of extraneous substances can carry off without diminishing it in size and weight; and what is it that the warm summer air brings to us from the flowers no man has yet been able to determine.

THERE was a vast amount of sense in that Troy landlord who took a set of false teeth out of the mouth of a man who had eaten a big supper and breakfast and wouldn't pay him. As they were what did the mischief they should pay the bill.

HINTS TO NOVEL WRITERS.

We reprint from Lippincott's Magazine a receipt for concocting a novel. It will be of great assistance to writers who, having only material for a brief tale, are desirous of publishing a novel in three volumes:

"Constance," said Philip to his sister, "I have got on very well with my novel. I have written fifty pages, described my hero and heroine, made them thoroughly in love with each other, and now I intend to part them for a season, without letting them be certain of the state of each other's hearts. I think narrative my forte, but it will not do to have no conversations, and my dialogue seems to be short and trite. Do look over this:"

'Helena. Your letter has arrived, I see.'

'Bertram. Yes, I have just read it.'

'H. Well?'

'B. It says I must delay no longer;'

'H. When shall you start?'

'B. To-morrow, at the latest.'

'H. Have you told my aunt?'

'B. Not yet; I must do it now.'

'H. Shall you go direct to London?'

'B. No, I stop one night at the Grange.'

'H Oh, then I will ask you to be the bearer of my letter.'

'B. Is that all you will permit me to do for you?"

'H. I am careful not to burden my friends.'

'B. Then you have no belief in true friendship?'

'Well, Philip, let me try whilst you are at the office, and see what I can suggest.'

'Your letter has arrived, I see,' said Helena, turning, as Bertram entered letter in hand.

'Yes, I have just read it," he replied, advancing and leaning his arm on the mantlepiece.

'Well?' said Helena, stooping as if to warm her hands, but really endeavoring to shade her face.'

'It says I must delay no longer," he answered, trying to assume an air of indifference.

'When shall you start? she said, resuming her work and fixing her eyes on her pattern.

'To-morrow, at the latest,' he replied, transferring the letter to his pocket.

'Have you told my aunt?' she said, searching her work-basket for her scissors.

'Not yet; I must do it now,' he said, putting back the little ornament his elbow had displaced.

'Shall you go direct to London?' she said, trying to disentangle a skein of colored yarn.

'No; I stop one night at the Grange,' he said quietly, but with an air of decision.

'Then I will ask you to be the bearer of my letter,' she added, laying down her work as she spoke.

'Is that all you will permit me to do for you?' he asked, anxiously.

'Oh, I never burden my friends,' she said, raising her head and tossing back her curls.

'Then you have no belief in true friendship,' he answered, in a tone of bitterness.

'That is pretty good,' said Constance to herself, 'but I will take these two young people out of doors; perhaps Philip may be better pleased.'

'Your letter has arrived, I see,' said Helena, advancing as Bertram opened the garden gate.

'Yes, have just read it,' he replied, as he secured the fastening.

'Well,' said Helena, taking the pith to the house.

'It says I must delay no longer,' he replied, proffering her a bunch of wild flowers he had gathered in his walk.

'When shall you start?' said Helena, turning away to pluck some rosebuds, which she added to her bouquet.

'To morrow, at the latest,' he answered, flinging aside roughly a branch that crossed his path.

'Have you told my aunt,' said Helena, tying the strings of her hat.

'No; I must do it now,' he said, holding out his hand to relieve her of her parasol as they entered the avenue.

'Shall you go direct to London?' she asked, hurriedly.

'No; I stop one night at the Grange,' he said, inviting her by a gesture to take a seat upon a rustic bench.

'Oh, then I will ask you to be the bearer of my letter,' she said, quickening her steps lest he should perceive her emotion.

'Is that all you will permit me to do for you?' he said, with more feeling than he had yet permitted himself to show.

'Yes; I am careful not to burden my friends,' she added, drawing her mantle around her and speaking in a tone of irony.

'Then you do not believe in true friendship,' he replied, as they reached the house, and with a heightened color threw back the hall door and made way for her to enter.

—"More bread, landlord. I always eat a good deal of bread with my meat." "So I see, sir, and a good deal of meat with your bread."

—"Have the jury agreed?" asked the sheriff, as he met a court attache on the stairs with a large pitcher in his hand. "Yes, sir; they agreed to have a gallon of beer, and sent me out for it."

THE DEMOCRACY.

The Democratic party on Wednesday of last week, at Wilkesbarre, nominated Hon. J. R. Ludlow, of Philadelphia, for Supreme Judge, and Frank M. Hutchinson, of Allegheny, for Treasurer, the former being at present Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Philadelphia, the latter connected with the Fort Wayne Railroad. This ticket is a respectable one, and personally the candidates are unexceptionable. The Convention re-adopted the Ohio Democratic retrograde platform, with the exception of the tariff plank. The candidates henceforth, represent not personal qualifications but principles, and are standard bearers of their party, with whom stands or falls the cause they uphold, as the issue may be favorable or otherwise. It is not probable that Democratic orators or papers will imitate the disastrous course of last Fall and wage another bitter and personal campaign. They have not forgotten their humiliating and crushing defeat so soon to repeat such folly. What sort of an issue then can they raise? The platform is an attempt to revive the past and to breath new life into the dry bones of the old States Rights Democracy of twenty years ago. The Rip Van Winkle Democracy has just been awakened from its long repose, and coming down from the mountains where no change occurs, into the valley of wonderful growth and development, does not quite understand the new order of things, and is out of all sorts with that modern progress that has made everything so strange, but it will learn a new lesson next October, viz: that the old questions that once divided the country are settled and new ones are demanding attention. The war established the fact that the Union is supreme over the States, and the doctrine of States Rights must be so interpreted as not to conflict with or impair the national supremacy; the Republican party extended the application of liberty to the black race and secured equal rights to all male citizens of whatever race or color. The national debt, being wisely managed, is now placed upon a sound basis for gradual extinguishment. American industry has been fostered, taxation reduced, internal improvements begun and carried forward, and others projected on a magnificent scale, and all difficulties with foreign nations adjusted. In regard to all these issues the Republican party has been faithful. The same spirit that prompted it to perform such noble work worthy of praise, animates it now and qualifies it to enter upon the discussion and settlement of new issues of great importance. The Democratic party casts its eyes backward, hankering after the flesh pots of Egypt, the Republican looks forward hoping for the fulfillment of the prophetic aspirations of the masses that labor may have its full reward, and all legalized wrongs against the well being of society be abolished. The questions that are uppermost in mind and discussion are such as relate to political economy or the elevation of the laboring class, and the Republican party is anxious to provide remedies for whatever in this respect needs curing. She advances towards the consummation slowly but with well considered steps. The Democracy finds fault, picks flaws, and grumbles, but proposes no practical measure of relief, and is without power or ideas. The people will not trust a party so helpless, having no sympathy with modern progress, no practical ability to manage public affairs, whose very name has become offensive to loyal citizens. What advantages has the Democratic party over the Republican that power should be entrusted to it? Does its past record inspire confidence? Is its negative character to be preferred? Is its total depravity a recommendation? Is its general tendency in the direction of more freedom and equality for the people? What are the means by which it can secure adequate legislation to carry out its plans? The party is hungry for power and the spoils of office, and it is an easy thing to make great promises, but quite a different one to fulfill those promises. Whoever leans upon the Democratic party for help, will find that the assistance rendered is but a broken reed. The Republican party has the power to execute its promises; it has made great ones heretofore and kept them to the letter; it never breaks a promise. The prosperity of the country today is due to the party in power, and why should it not be continued in power? No good reason can be given, and, therefore, no one can doubt the result of the elections this Fall.

COMMUNISTIC TENDENCIES.

There was a meeting of Grangers at Boston on Monday, at which J. C. Abbott, General Deputy of the National Grange, and Hon. Amassa Walker spoke on the great revolution going on in the country in regard to cheaper transportation and railroad monopolies. Mr. Abbott contended that the cost of freight and travel could be reduced to one-quarter of the present rates, and gave statistics of the earnings of different railroads to support the assertion. Mr. Walker thought that the only way to protect the business interests of the country, is through the interference of Congress. He spoke of three ways: first, by a general law fixing the rate of travel and freight on all the roads; second, to create new lines between the principal depots of transportation; and third, by purchasing all roads and placing them under government management, to be leased, which would open all roads to the public at the cheapest rate. This last plan was advised as most feasible. Among the industrial classes there is a growing tendency to favor communistic doctrines. The discussion of postal telegraphy and government management of railroads shows that communistic ideas are prevalent in the community, and in this respect a radical change is taking place in the education of the people. The old doctrine that the duties of government are exhausted in the protection of life and property seems to be yielding to one that requires governmental agency to develop and manage all large and common interests. Democracy refers everything to private enterprise, and by this means educates and develops a strong and independent race of people. Communism teaches the people to depend on the government and destroys independence of character. Let the people work out their own progress and the very effort will make them strong and self-reliant. It is possible, however, that the Government might run the railroads and telegraph cheaper than they are now managed, but having acquired so much additional power and patronage, what party without a revolution would be able to overthrow the party in power? Where would the end of this interference be? This tendency is dangerous, and the government should let alone all business that can be possibly transacted by the people in their private capacity. While governmental aid is a matter of necessity to accomplish a great national undertaking, the necessity may excuse the interference, but that interference or aid should stop as soon as the necessity ceases, and the people be left to work out results as they may. We do not think that the telegraph lines or railroads will pass into the Government's hands for some time yet.

POLITICAL NOTES.

NOT to give the idea too dramatic a turn, it seems as if the Democracy were determined to shake Speer.

BUTLER is going to be Governor of Massachusetts, notwithstanding the opposition of the silk-stocking gentry. Where is Scott? Another letter from him to Butler would now be in order.

SPEER was regarded as the rising man in the Democratic party in Pennsylvania until he got squelched at Wilkesbarre. Now he is the deadest Salary grabber in the county. Another evidence that honesty is the best policy.

WOLF, of sudden conversion notoriety, is likely to be re-nominated by the Republicans of Union and Snyder for Assembly. He is certainly fortunate in having a constituency that adhere closely to party usage, regardless of the fitness and integrity of the candidate.

MITCHELL, of Tioga, Chairman of Ways and Means Committee of the House last session, has been re-nominated by the Republicans of Tioga county, and will be the next Speaker of the House, unless Myers, of the adjoining county of Bradford, should also be a candidate, in which event McCormick, of Allegheny, may carry off the prize.

THE nomination of Hutchinson for State Treasurer by the Democratic State Convention is a virtual concession that Mackey will be elected, and that the Democrats intend to make their fight for the election of Supreme Judge. Ludlow is the strongest candidate they could have presented, and it is possible he may not be beaten over fifty thousand.

THE Democratic Governor, of Ohio thinks that the Republicans take a great deal better care of the rebels than the Northern soldiers, and is endeavoring to win, by such blandishments the support of the loyal soldiers who during the war he denounced as hirelings and mudsills. The effort he may as well forego. His language is that of a demagogue seeking office, and will injure rather than help his Gubernatorial chances.

THE Democrats are quietly working to get control of the Senate next session. They expect to elect Nagle in Philadelphia, Dill in Union, defeat Anderson in Crawford, and carry the Montgomery and Schuylkill districts, thus insuring a majority in the next Senate. Considering the apathy existing in our ranks, it is no wonder they are encouraged to make the effort, and there is a possibility that they may succeed unless Republicans in the districts named are aroused and an active canvass be commenced at once.

IT is intimated that there will be an effort on the part of certain disaffected persons to defeat one or two of our candidates for Assembly. Mr. M'Kee, of Butler, and Mr. Cross, of Beaver, are named in this connection. We trust our friends will look after this not only in this county but throughout the district. They are both good men, and the honest, orderly citizens, especially the Republican citizens of this district cannot afford to have either defeated. The election of the State ticket is important, but if anything, the election of such men to the Legislature is more important. Friends be on your guard and report any evidence of treachery at once to the several county committees of the district.

THE Democratic Senatorial Conference in the district composed of the counties of Union, Snyder, Perry and Northumberland, re-nominated A. H. Dill, which indicates a determined effort on the part of the Democracy to carry that Senatorial district. The Republicans have a majority of nearly if not quite one thousand in the district, and there should be no question as to the result; but Dill is very popular, having been elected three years ago in a district as largely Republican, and the Republicans have been quarreling over the nomination until many are disposed to concede his election. He is a gentleman of ability and integrity and the Republicans must select a candidate of like character or they will not only nvite but deserve defeat.

POLITICAL.

—John M. Stehman has been elected chairman of the Lancaster Republican County Committee.

—The Pitsburgh Commercial says: In the Western States the Democratic party pretends to be anti-monopoly; in Virginia its candidate for Governor was nominated in the railroad interest. The difference is accounted for by the fact that Virginia is believed to be Democratic, while in the Western States that party is in the minority. Wherever the party has the power it is on the monopoly side.

—The Democrats of Juniata county on Monday placed in nomination the following ticket: State Senator—Dr. J. M. Crawford; Assemcly—Jerome Hetrick; Sheriff—W. H. Krouse; Register and Recorder—John T. Metlin; Treasurer—Samuel Showers; County Conmissioner—Alex. Crozier; Jury Commissioner—David Partner; Auditor—John Fitzgerald; Coroner—Joseph Middagh.

—Politics appears to be mixed in the eastern coal regions. In Schuylkill county, there is a prospect of three local tickets—Republican, Democratic and Workingmen's, the last named put up by the miners. The Democrats are in further trouble because they have no county organ. The Pottsville Standard, which has hitherto occupied that position, is independent, repudiates the Ohio platform of the Straight-Outs, and has almost indicated an intention to bolt the regular nominations.

—The Venango county Democratic Convention met at Franklin on Tuesday and made the following nominations: Assembly—A. J. Keenan; County Treasurer—Isaac M. Sowers: County Commissioner—A. J. Cowan: Coroner—Dr. S. G. Snowden; Jury Commissioner—J. E. Muse; County Auditor—M. S. Duffield. H. I. Beers, of Rouseville, and S. C. T. Dodd, of Franklin, were appointed delegates to the State Convention. John McKisseck was selected as the chairman of the County Committee.

—The Blair county Democratic Convention met in Hollidaysburg on Monday, and nominated the following ticket: Assembly—James Funk; Sheriff—John Rocket; Commissioner—Oliver Haggertyn; Jury Commissioner—James McIntosh; Poor Director—Emnuel Clapper; Auditor—Robert L. Holliday; Coroner—John Hickey. Thomas W. Jackson was elected Representative delegate to the State Convention, and S. M. Woodcock Chairman of the County Committee. The delegates to the State Convention were instructed to support Hon. James R. Ludlow for Supreme Judge. The Resolutions are of the usual kind, except that the salary grab was denounced.

—How many have it in their thoughts that there are no less than seven political parties before the country? Yet so it is, and the names of these organizations are as follows: Republican, Democratic, Liberal, Labor Reform, Woman Suffrage, Temperance, and Farmers. Surely here is an opportunity for every "free and enlightened citizen" to suit himself with a set of political principles and to march to the polls with a congenial band of associates. Every question that can possibly be twisted into an issue, and some that cannot, has its place somewhere among these parties, with all its sides duly provided for. And yet it is not an era of special political activity.

—A statement having been made by a writer in Harrisburg, signing himself Junius, in urging the repeal of the Local Option law, that liquor was furnished last winter by the Librarian of the Senate, at the public expense. Mr. Russell Errett, editor of the Pittsburgh Commercial, and Clerk of the Senate thus replies:

So far from this being a "notorious fact," it is not a fact at all. There was no bar-room in the Senate chamber, last winter, in charge of the Senate Librarian or any one else, and no Senator partook of whiskey or brandy at the cost of the Commonwealth. Peremptory orders were given, at the opening of the session, by both Speaker and Clerk, to the Librarian, that liquor of all kinds should be excluded from the chambers, and the orders were strictly adhered to.

—A dispatch from Potteville on Monday says: Hon. William M. Randall was yesterday defeated in the Democratic Convention by a combination that was a perfect surprise, as a majority of the delegates had been instructed for him. His friends assert that money did it, which has created a bitter dissatisfaction among old-line Democrats of the district, believing, as they do, that it was procured by open and shameful corruption. There is a rumor on the streets that the friends of Senator Randall insist upon his being an independent candidate. O. P. Pechtel, of Pottsville, was the nominee. Boyer, Egan and Foster are the candidates for the lower house. Commenting on this the Harrisburg Telegraph says: Our readers will learn from the Telegraphic dispatches from Schuylkill county, that the Democrats of that county have cheated each other in the nomination of their candidate for Senator. Mr. Randall alleges that a majority of the delegates were openly instructed to support him, and that he was utterly surprised when he was counted out. Mr. Randall is an ultra Democrat, and it makes little difference to the Republicans who represents that county, if a Democrat is to come; but we must confess that he deserves better treatment at the hands of the Democracy. He has labored hard and faithfully for the party.

Cooper, Treasurer of the Society. B. M. EWING, Sec'y.

The New Castle Gazette and Democrat of August 29th says: A news item is going the rounds of the press which states that Hon. Wm. McClelland has been elected editor of the South Side Herald, of Pittsburgh. This statement, however, is erroneous, as the gentleman on whom this honor has been conferred, is a cousin of our ex-Congressman who rejoices in the name of James L. McClelland, is a young man of superior talents and is a graduate of Monmouth College, Illinois.

The Alliance Monitor of August 28th says: On last Sunday it was our privilege to hear a sermon by Rev. W. H. Locke, D. D., pastor of the M. E. Church of this city. The subject, "The Actual and Helpful Presence of the Master with His People and Church," was ably, eloquently and artistically handled. We thought as we listened to the sermon, which but must desire a religion, at once so palpably of God and so manifestly attended with an abiding Presence in each earnest follower and an Almighty Protectorate in its cumulative whole. None of our sister cities can boast more able or earnest Pulpit Teachers than our own Alliance.

George Poe, of Green township, now 83 years of age, about the first day of August of this year, in very hot weather raked and bound and helped to shock the same, 53 dozen sheaves of oats, and experienced no harm from the labor. Mr. Poe is a son of Adam Poe, who, in the early days of this country, killed the celebrated Indian, Big Foot.

The Butler Citizen says: On Monday morning last Messrs. A. S. Moore and H. H. Goucher, Attorneys of this place, went to Greece City to attend to an assignee's sale. About nine o'clock in the evening they started home by way of the hill road. The heavy rains of the afternoon had made the already almost impassible roads completely so. Behind these gentlemen was a Mr. Cready, a brother of the pic nic man near the Orphans' Home, who was driving two horses in a light wagon. At the forks of the road where the hill road leaves the lower one, near the Robb bridge, they found the creek booming full and the road overflown, so as to completely hide it. Notwithstanding the darkness of the night the party concluded to push forward and cross the bridge, Mr. Cready following. Owing to the intense darkness their horse went over the embankment and in a moment all were engulfed in the swift moving waters and hurried forward with fearful speed to an almost certain death. Mr. Cready, who followed closely after, was also caught by the remorseless waters, and, but for the intense darkness, a scene, that beggars description would have been unfolded to the gaze of a chance spectator. Three men and three horses, and two buggies, were carried from the road and hurried over the submerged fence and through the field beyond. A lively struggle for life ensued. Cready succeeded in making a landing half a mile from the bridge; while Goucher and Moore were carried to an island near the foot of the meadow, from which they were rescued by Mr. Robb and Cready, by means of ropes. Cready's team made a safe landing, while Goucher and Moore's horse and buggy were found lodged in a brush heap, the horse dead and the buggy comparatively uninjured. Altogether it was a providential escape. The lost horse was from Breckenridge & Barr's stable.

The Mr. Moore above is a son of Al. Moore formerly of this place and a brother of H. R Moore of the firm of Hice, Wilson & Moore.

The September number of Wood's Household Magazine is on our table. We always have a good word to say for this publication—it is such a well-conducted book—so wide awake, so lively and entertaining, yet always so chaste and refined. It is a regular little go-ahead, too, as comparison between its numbers will prove. We learn that the firm of S. S. Wood & Co., dissolved in March last, the "Co." (S. E. Shutes, Mayor of Newburgh) retaining possession of the magazine, and associating H. V. Osborne (Tenoroon) as editor. Although the publication really changed hands, it has not suffered from the management of a new publisher or new editor, but under the redoubled efforts of its energetic proprietor, has gained new force and new attractiveness. Price only one dollar a year. Address

Mrs. James Craven, of New Brighton, met with a sad accident on Wednesday morning of last week, which resulted in her death a few hours after. Mrs. Craven was picking elder berries near Marcus's crossing, and came out of the dense bushes there on to the railroad track just as the Enon accommodation was about to pass, and was struck by the cow catcher and thrown some six feet from the track. The Coroner's inquest found no intentional blame resting upon the employees of the train, although the rate of speed seems to have been faster than that allowed by the borough ordinance. Mrs. Craven was in her thirty-fifth year, and the mother of three little children.

Delicious Custard Cake.—Take two cups sugar (powdered is best), one-half cup butter, one cup milk, two eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately, mix together; flavor with lemon or vanilla; add two and one-half cups sifted flour having sifted one measure Banner Baking Powder; bake in four jelly cake pans.

For the Custard.—Take two cups of milk; when it boils add two heaping table-spoonfuls corn starch, two eggs, well beaten, one-half cup white sugar, flavor with same as in cake, put the custard between the layers of the cake while both are warm.

Each can of the Banner Baking Powder contains a small measure, to be used even full, according to printed directions. If you cannot obtain this really valuable article from your grocer, send twenty-five cents by mail, addressed to Banner Baking Powder, P. O. Lock Box, 317, Pittsburgh, Pa., and you will receive, postage paid, a quarter pound package, together with a list of fifty valuable recipes.

Assault and Battery.—On Saturday Mrs. Glazier, of Green township, got into an altercation with her son's wife; the battle of words became hot, and the son's wife gave away and retreated before the storm in good order up the hill back of the house, to where her natural protector was digging

"Down in a coal mine underneath the ground,
Where no ray of sunshine ever can be found."

The young wife screamed for her lord and master, and out stepped he and a Mr. McKinnen, armed with pick and shovel. Mrs Glazier says she was pounded and bruised badly. She went to 'Squire Boyd, in Hookstown, and got out a warrant for the ungallant diggers. J. M. Reed arrested them, we believe.

Information Wanted.—Mrs. Margaret Rambo, whose mind is unsound, left her sister's house, Mrs. David May, in Chippewa township, Beaver county, Pa., on the 27th of July. When last heard from she was at Vanport, two miles below Beaver. When she left Mrs. May's house she had on a gingham bonnet, and a black dress, and a breakfast shawl thrown over her shoulders. She is about 68 years of age. Any information concerning her, forwarded to Peter Rambo, Shippingport, Pa., will be thankfully received. Our exchanges will confer a favor by copying the above.

Wanted.—John H. Ewing, of Shippingport Pa., is now buying WOOL, paying the highest prices. He wants all he can get. jy18tf

Beaver College to the parents and youth of the county: This institution from feeble beginnings twenty years since, has attained to the control of buildings, furniture, apparatus and grounds to the value of sixty thousand dollars. The design of its founders was to bring opportunities for an advanced education within the reach of the youth of the county and vicinity. This design in the further enlargement of the building, and the increase of its advantages has been kept steadily in view. Persons not resident of the county have consecrated their thousands for this purpose, while some of our own citizens, drawn here by the desire to educate their children, have given their ten thousand dollars. The object of the college is to teach, impart, instruct in science, literature, music and the art of teaching. This is not a school of theology to promulgate the tenets of any particular sect. Persons of different denominations vied with each other in its founding and in its support, and various denominations have always been and still are represented in the Board of Trustees and Faculty. The President, though an ordained minister, has devoted all his active life of thirty years to his chosen profession. He is an honored graduate of one of the best New England colleges, and has taught successfully in the east as well as elsewhere. For fourteen years he has labored in this institution, with what success the present status of the college clearly shows. Since his connection with it within a not very large radius a score of institutions have failed. This result has largely grown out of the improved condition of our public schools. Still we need academies, not so many, but stronger and better equipped ones. This school is not an experiment any longer, but may be considered an established fact. Will parents and guardians lend it their aid? The desire of the Trustees is to make it better from year to year. The larger the attendance the more can be done for those in attendance. It is evident that a better Faculty can be secured for a hundred students than if the funds must be divided between two sets of teachers, both of whom are doing the same work, while teaching fifty each. It is believed the Faculty provided here was never equal to what is secured for the next year. Will you by your patronage and encouragement enable the Trustees and their indefatigable President to do more for you next year. COM.

Beaver, Sept. 3, 1873.

Personal.—Joe Snellenburg, of the well known and reliable firm of S. & J. Snellenburg, popular clothers and merchant tailors, of New Brighton, is now in the east where he intends remaining a few weeks for the purpose of purchasing a very large, new and complete stock of ready made clothing, also a complete line of Cloths, Kerseys, Cassimeres, Diagonels, Trecoes, Meltons and Jeans. Also English goods, Fustians, Corduroys and Moleskin. Mr. Snellenburg's long and practical experience in the clothing business enables him to select the very best material, while his business capacity ensures purchases at low figures, knowing as he does that by buying largely the best rates are secured. He intends buying the largest stock ever brought to the county, and selling them lower than any house west of Philaphia. Hats, Caps, Trunks and Valises of every variety, also underwear and Hoisery. Coats, Pants, Vests or whole suits made to order or any desired material and fits guaranteed. Come one, come all. Grand opening September 10 to 25. For further particulars see New Brighton Illustrated News published monthly by S. & J. Snellenburg.

As the Public Schools are about to open in the county we call the attention of the Directors in the county to the importance of repairing and cleansing the school houses and making them pleasant and comfortable. We trust that the best teachers will be secured that can be obtained, and that everything will be done that ought to be to advance the interest of education in our midst.

As the purchase of a Sewing Machine is of may be an act for a life-time, care should be taken in selecting one that time and use have proven to be the best. Time tries all things. "Use only furnishes the final test." Opinions of the skillful may be of value, but time is needed to confirm them. While the Singer Sewing Machine Company has given the public the finest fruits of inventive genius, they have guarded it from a multitude of traps. Attachments have been added for various purposes, but it has kept free from all useless complications. Simplicity of parts, and adaptation to the widest range of work has been the constant aim.

Instead of boasting of a variety of useless stitches and movements, it claims to make but One Kind of Stitch, and that with the Fewest Movements Possible. Hence the Machine may run constantly for twenty years, or a life-time, and work just as well as when new.

Struck by Lightning.—On Monday of last week, three persons, Mr. Isaac M. Phillips, his son, and a colored man named George Thomas, all of Pulaski, Lawrence county, while engaged in loading oats, were suddenly struck down by a severe stroke of lightning. Two horses also that were hitched to the wagon, were prostrated, killing one instantly and stunning the other. The men revived, but the escape seemed almost miraculous. The most singular feature of the occurrence was that there was no rain, and no clouds appeared in the sky, but the air was charged with electricity.

Rev. J. L. Fulton, pastor of Broadway Presbyterian church, Baltimore, was in town on Monday. Mr. Fulton since leaving Mill Creek church, Green tp., has for the most part been in good health, with the exception of occasional attacks of ague this summer. He preached last Sunday at Mill Creek church to his old congregation.

J. Snellenburg goes east to-day; will be gone two weeks, procuring the largest stock of clothing, &c., ever brought to Beaver county. Be on the look-out for the grand opening about the middle of September.

THE SEALED WILL.

"Do you suppose, mamma, in case the money goes from me, that it will be given to you?"

"Dear child, how can I ever guess? Your aunt, remember, is your father's sister, not mine; so it is scarcely likely she has thought of me. I am afraid the heir in the sealed will is John Garland."

"Mamma!"

"It is only guess-work, dear."

"But he is so unfit to have the responsibility of money; a man known to be a gambler and a drinking man, if not an actual drunkard."

"Very true. Yet he is the nearest relative your aunt Jessie had, excepting only yourself."

"I can scarcely think Aunt Jessie would leave him fifty thousand dollars."

"My dear, she has left it to you, her niece and namesake."

"Upon the condition that I shall never marry. If I do, the sealed will in the hands of her lawyer is to be opened, and the money pass from me to the heir or heirs named therein. You must know me well enough to be sure that the money would never tempt me to break my engagement; yet for your sake I wish—Oh, why did Aunt Jessie leave it to me at all."

"Do not think of me. I can live as we have done since father died. But, Jessie," and Mrs. Markham's face looked grave and sad, "there's one view of the matter you do not take."

"I dare say there are fifty. Remember we have now had only an hour or two to think, since the letter came from the lawyer. But what is the view you mean?"

"Charlie."

"Charlie?"

Jessie's large brown eyes were opened to their widest extent as she repeated the name, adding:

"Why, I haven't thought of anything but Charlie!"

"But—I mean—dear me?" said the mother, shrinking from uttering her own thoughts. "You know, dear, you have always been considered your aunt's heiress, and Charlie is young, and only commencing the practice of his profession. It may be that he will—"

"Be false to me for the sake of money?" interrupted Jessie, with the rosiest of cheeks and brightest of eyes. "We will soon test that," and she drew a writing table to her side. "I will send him a copy of the lawyer's letter, and"—here her voice and eyes softened—"the assurance that Aunt Jessie's will will make no difference to me."

Mrs. Markham made no objection to this step, but after the letter was signed, sealed and dispatched to the village by Polly, the only servant of Mrs. Markham's household, she called Jessie again to her side.

Over the fair sweet face of the young girl there had crept a shade of gravity and perplexity since the arrival of the lawyer's letter, that clouded the brown eyes and gave the sensitive, mobile mouth a firmer pressure than was quite natural. Life had not been all sunshine for Jessie Markham, yet hers was one of those buoyant natures that find the silver lining for every cloud, and coax some sweetness from every bitter dose. Her father had been dead six years, and his business affairs having been complicated in some way not comprehensible to feminine intellects, his widow and child found themselves reduced to an income that barely covered the necessaries of life. They left the city, and took a small cottage in the small village of Merton, where Mrs. Markham soon procured a class of music scholars, and herself gave Jessie lessons in the higher branches of English studies, German, French and music, till, at eighteen, her daughter also procured a few pupils in languages. They were very happy in their mutual affection, in the love of their pupils, and the cares of their little household.

It had been understood from the time Jessie was a tiny baby that she would inherit the fortune of her maiden aunt, for whom she was named, and who came from the city every summer to spend a month or two in the little cottage, always bringing pretty presents to brighten the home of her brother's widow, and lavishing tenderest affection upon her neice.

Yet, though Jessie herself had known of her aunt's supposed intentions, neither she nor her mother had ever made calculations upon a fortune dependent upon the death of the one for whom they felt the warmest affection, and the idea that others could be influenced by it was a new thought to the young girl.

She had given to her betrothed, Charlie Seaton, the first love of her young heart, believing his love was all her own. In the six years she had lived at Merton, child and maiden, Charlie Seaton had been her devoted admirer from the first, and had recently finished his course of law study and been admitted to the bar. His fortune, inherited from his father, was very small, barely covering his expenditure for board and clothing; but he was energetic, industrious, and without brilliant talent, a clear-headed intelligent student, promising to make a capable lawyer, if not a shining light at the bar.

Answering her mother's call, Jessie nestled down in her favorite seat at her feet, saying sadly:

"If Charlie was influenced by any hope of Aunt Jessie's money, mamma, it is better to know it now. I had supposed we would have to wait for our wedding day until he had some practice, and you know I have a little sum of my own toward first expenses. We could live here and—there, I will not think of it any more till the answer comes to my letter."

"While you wait, my dear," said her mother, "shall I tell you what I think is the explanation of your aunt's singular will? You, who know her only as the gentle, sad woman of her later years, can scarcely imagine. I presume that she was once as bright, hopeful, and sunny-tempered as yourself. I think it is to save you from her own sorrow that she has taken from you the power of giving wealth to a mere fortune hunter. She would have you wooed and won for yourself a lone, and as she has never positively said you were to be her heiress, she has probably never supposed Charlie biased by that hope. Still, dear, it is possible."

"Yes, it is possible," said Jessie, slowly, "but tell me about Aunt Jessie."

"Your grandfather Markham, Jessie, was one of the leading merchants of New York, when your aunt, his only daughter, was introduced into society. Your Uncle Hoyt was in good practice as a physician, your father doing then a fair business, and already married and in his own home.

"It was, therefore, with the name of an heiress that Jessie danced through her first season, a careless, light-hearted girl, very pretty and accomplished enough to make a pleasing impression wherever she went. She was but a little over twenty when she became engaged to Stanley Horton, the most fascinating man in all our circle of friends. Not only handsome and talanted (and he was both,) but possessing in a remarkable degree the courtly polish and winning grace of manners that go so far toward gaining a woman's heart, the absorbing love that Jessie felt for him seemed mutual, and congratulations were the order of the day, when your grandfather failed. From a man of wealth he became actually poor, and losing energy and hope, he came with Jessie to share our home. Stanley Horton, the man we all supposed to be a devoted lover, was fully aware of the change in Jessie's prospects, yet he continued his visits, making no abrupt, ungentlemanly desertion of his betrothed. Yet we, who watched her with the jealousy of affection, soon discovered a change in her. She became pale and sad, often tearful, till finally she confided to me that Stanley was evidently weary of her, and had ceased to love her. Even then she attributed the change to some defect in herself, not seeing the mercenary motive till later, when time had taken the glamour from her eyes and heart. She gave him back his ring and promises, thus accepting the position his unmanly conduct had forced upon her; of herself breaking the engagement between them. The first love of her life was the last. She was your grandfather's comfort until he died, and then went to keep house for Hoyt, who lost his wife and baby one year after his wedding-day. When he died he left her the house and money, and she lived there till she died. Still I know she loved you, and I am quite sure her will is not designed so much to keep you single as it is to win the disinterested love of your future husband."

There was a long silence after Mrs. Markham concluded her story, and Jessie allowed her head to rest in her mother's lap, under her caressing hand trying to picture a future of easy competency shared by the companion of her life. It had its bright side; there was still love and happiness for her yet. And then a bright face crowned with curly brown hair would come before her, and she knew that the handsome house nor the comfortable income could ever fill her heart if Charlie left an aching void there.

Suddenly, like a gust of wind, there swept into the little sitting-room, a tall, broad shouldered young man, in a gray tweed suit and slouch hat, which latter article found a resting place upon the floor, as the young giant braced himself before Jessie in an attitude of grim defiance that sent thrills of glad music into her heart.

"Will you have the kindness, Miss Markham," said the intruder, towering in his six feet of manhood over Jessie's low seat, "to tell me what you mean by that absurd letter Polly handed me? Was it not fully understood that you and I were to share this cottage with your mamma until I attained sufficient legal eminence to warrant the purchase of a brown-stone front in New York? Was I not deluded into the belief that your presence in the culinary department of our establishment was to reduce our expenses to the limits of our present income? What it not represented to me that my present board was sufficient to meet the requirements of two in this domicile? In short, Miss Markham, in what way was I ever led to suppose that the fortune of your spinster aunt was to influence in the slightest degree your matrimonial relations in regard to myself? I pause for a reply."

Jessie stood up, her hands meekly folded together, and her happy eyes downcast till the long lashes kissed her cheek.

"Please forgive me this time, and I'll never do it again," she said; and then the laugh dimpled her cheek, danced in her eyes, and rippled out clear and sweet upon the air:

"Oh, Charlie I knew you never thought of Aunt Jessie's money."

"And you," said Charlie, holding her off at arm's length, "you can have it all if you give me up."

"As if I loved money better than you," said Jessie, nestling now in the strong arms wrapped closely around her.

It seemed, however, as if Charlie was actually afraid of the money that was so temptingly near Jessie's grasp, for he commenced a series of interviews that bore entirely upon the subject of an immediate marriage.

"What is there to wait for?" he would ask, and then enter upon calculations of his present expenses and those of the future, proving most conclusively that there was a decided saving for both in uniting their incomes.

"You remind me," said Jessie, "of the Dutchman who said he could almost support himself alone, and it was a pity if two of them could not do it entirely."

But though she laughed at him, Jessie was quite willing to admit the force of his reasoning, and one bright June morning, six months after Aunt Jessie's death there was a quiet wedding in the village church, and a breakfast in the cottage for a few chosen friends. Among these was Aunt Jessie's lawyer, for the will stipulated that the sealed codicil was to be opened at Jessie's wedding if she preferred love to money.

The bride was a little paler than usual when, with a solemn face, the New York lawyer broke the big red seal. Visions of John Garland holding drunken revels in her aunt's house flitted across her mind, and then she looked into Charlie's face, and over her own crept an expression of perfect content.

The will was opened and found to contain only a letter directed to Jessie, and a short, legally worded formula, making herself and her chosen husband joint inheritors of her aunt's fortune. Truly, the bride opened the letter from the dead.

With loving words Aunt Jessie blessed her, and wished her happiness.

"I do not," she wrote, "approve of the money power in a family being entirely in the hands of a woman: therefore, you will find, dear Jessie, that half of my fortune only is yours, the remaining half to go to the husband who has proved that he loved you for your own sweet self, not for your fortune."

During the wedding tour of the young couple, Mrs. Markham, at their earnest solicitation, took an affectionate farewell of her pupils, and removed her household treasures to the New York mansion, to which, in due time, came Charlie and Jessie to brighten the long silent rooms with their happiness, and establish that loving circle that makes home out of any house, however grand, or however humble.

READ THE FACTS.

Mrs. U. S. Grant uses in her family the Bradbury and says: "I am perfectly delighted with it."
Theodore Tilton says: "I have had the beautiful Piano so long that now to ask me how I like it is like asking me how I like one of my children. In fact if you were to ask the children I'm afraid they would say they liked it almost as well as they like me. It speaks every day the year round and never looses its voice. I wish its owner could do half so well."

LETTER FROM BISHOP SIMPSON.

PHILADELPHIA, April 17, 1868.

T. G. SMITH & Co.—Gents—Having used one of your Bradbury Pianos, it has given great satisfaction to my family and to many visitors who have heard its sweet tones at my house. It is a very superior instrument, both in finish and power. I heartily wish you success as successor to the late Wm. B. Bradbury, in continuing the manufacture of his justly celebrated Pianos. Yours truly,
M. SIMPSON.

Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, Washington D. C., Decides the Bradbury to be the National Piano of the country.

Vice Admiral D. D. Porter, Washington D. C., "The Bradbury is exquisitely and beautifully proportioned. We are delighted with ours."

Grand Central Hotel, New York—"In preference to all others, we selected the Bradbury Pianos for our parlors. Our guests pronounce them splendid."

St. Nicholas Hotel, New York.—"Have always used the Bradbury Pianos in our parlors, and take pleasure in recommending them."

Hon. John Simpson, M. P., Canada, says: "The Bradbury can't be excelled. The best in the Dominion."

M. Simpson, Bishop M. E. Church, Philadelphia. "We know of no better Piano than the Bradbury."

Rev. Daniel Curry, Editor Christian Advocate: "I purchased a Bradbury Piano, and it is a splendid instrument in every respect."

Theodore Tilton, Editor Independent: "If you were to ask my children, I am afraid they would say they liked our Bradbury almost as well as they like me."

Dr. Daniel Wise, Editor Sunday School Advocate. "I use the Bradbury Piano, and think, like his music it cannot be excelled."

Rev. Dr. Ferris, New York. "My Bradbury has stood longer in tune, and sounds better than any Piano in my District."

Rev. Dr. Fields, Editor of the Evangelist. "I have used a Bradbury for years in my family, and think there is none superior."

Sands Street Church Brooklyn, St. Luke's M. E. Church, and a host of other churches use the Bradbury Piano in their Lecture and School Rooms, also the Conservatories and prominent Hotels in the United States.

John Caughey, Beaver Pa., purchased from me three years ago a No. 6 Bradbury, and says: "There is no better, or sweeter toned, or more desirable Piano, according to my judgment and experience, than my Piano. It has given entire satisfaction, and grows better as it becomee older."

Wm. McCoy, of Beaver, Pa., in the spring of 1871, bought from me a No. 8 Bradbury, which has proven to be a superior instrument in every respect.

Miss Mary McGaffick also owns and uses a Bradbury.

MANHOOD: HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, also Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, Induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

Price in a sealed envelope only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

HOUSE AND FARM.

Sore Nose and Saddle Galls in Horses.

The nose of many horses sometimes discovered to be sore, and intrusted with scabs, when no other disease is apparent. This condition may be the result of constitutional debility; but it is, in the Southern States, more frequently produced by a certain poisonous weed that grows in those latitudes, and which, from its peculiar effects upon the horse, is there known as "sneeze-weed." It is a plant growing about one and a half feet high, and stands very thickly upon the ground, which, at some seasons, is covered with the old petals of its yellow blossoms and the leaves which fall from its st alks. The fine particles of these the horse snuffs up his nose, when grazing near the weed, and they create sore upon the nostril. Especially is this the case when the animal feeds in such places early in the morning before the dew is gone. At that time, the green weed itself will poison the nose. Young colts are the most easily affected by these agencies, and very often have noses perfectly covered with scabs. At one time, the opinion was almost universal at the South that "sneeze-weed" would kill, not only horses, but even cattle; but, although extremely poisonous, there is no sufficient ground for believing it to be so deadly as this.

The nose is frequently poisoned by other weeds and vines, many of which, though perfectly harmless when taken into the stomach, will seriously irritate and fester the skin. The "jimson weed" will poison the nose of cattle and sheep as well as of horses; and yet all of them have been known to eat quantities of both its leaves and buds, not only without detriment, but with positive benefit to health.

Treatment—The mercurial salve will be the proper remedy in this case. Apply a very thin coat of it to the sore parts, and rub it in well with a little mop. It may be best to mix the salve with equal parts of lard and sulphur before using it thus. Annoint the parts each morning until the sores and scabs are all gone.

Saddle galls—Nothing is more common than for the back of the horse to become chafed and raw from the unequal pressure of the saddle; and sometimes this continues until troublesome tumors are formed. After a time these break, and discharge considerable quantities of matter. The same consequences may proceed from the severe pressure of other portions of the harness besides the saddle.

These injuries of the back have taken different names, according to the phases which they assume, from the first chafing of the skin to the final ulceration of the tumor. Patches of skin, under the saddle, often appear destitute of blood, and these are called "warbles." After the tumor has gone, the saddle is replaced too soon, before the parts are entirely healed, and while there is yet considerable tenderness. The rubbing now occasions a hard, almost horny excrescence, and this has strangely received the name of "naval gall," in consequence of its location upon the back, opposite the naval.

So many names, for what is substantially the same trouble, tend to confusion, and are certainly unnecessary. Saddle galls they all were in the beginning, and saddle galls they may be appreciately designated under all after developments.

Treatment—The treatment will necessarily vary somewhat, according to the circumstances in which the horse, and the person using him, happen to be placed. If at home, the first and essential thing to do is to let the animal rest. Do not put a saddle on him until he is entirely well. In all stages of the complaint, use the corrosive linament, which will readily heal the sore, in all cases. If the horse is exempt from service under the saddle. Continue to apply it daily, with a little mop, always drying it in well with a hot iron, until the cure is completed.

But it may be the taveler's misfortune, when far away from home, to find that the back of his horse has become badly galled with the saddle, and this in warm weather especially; or perhaps the skin of the back is scalded from the use of a woolen blanket, forming a worse sore than even saddle galls. At any rate, his horse is in no condition to bear the saddle; yet he must ride the poor creature, or else dispose of him at a sacrifice, and hurry forward by some other mode of conveyance. In such a predicament, the knowledge of some means, either to cure the sore back or remove pressure from it, when the saddle is being worn, would not be merely of pecuniary benefit, but, to every humane person, it would prove a source of real pleasure.

Such means we can easily suggest. As soon as the condition of the back is discovered, wash the sore with clean, cold water, and when dry, cover it entirely over with a piece of adhesive plaster. This must first be heated, of course, until the salve with which it is to be coated has been melted, and it must then be applied as quickly as possible and pressed down with the hands. The best plan is to carry some live coals from the fire; or a hot iron, close to the horse, and there heat the plaster. If the back is greatly swollen, and a matter has formed cut a hole in the center of the plaste,r before putting it on, so that the matter can escape readily.

Such a plaster will prevent the friction of the saddle or blanket, while the salve upon it is very healihg. It excludes the air, and is almost eduivalent to a new piece of skin.—American Stock Journal.

Gathering Ripe Fruit.

The following from Josiah Hoopes, of Westchester, Pa., is good: In regard to the gathering of ripe fruits of different kinds, no fruit should be taken from the tree or plant during a damp time, and especially when the dew is plentiful in early morning. Never be so hurried as to find cause for the excuse, I had no time to hand-pick my fruits, and consequeutly was forced to shake them off; for such is very poor policy. Fruit so gathered will almost inevitably decay from the effects of bruise. Each specimen should be taken from the tree, one by one, and handled as if they had been so many eggs. The slightest bruise or even abraison of the skin is the sure forerunner of a dark spot, which will eventually change into some form of rot. The spores of seed of fungi are always ready to assist in the work of dissolution, and the slightest scratch gives them a foothold for their destructive work.

Scarcely any variety of the largest fruits color and ripen so well if left to perfect themselves on the tree, and especially is this true in respect to pears. Summer varieties, as they approach maturity, lose their hold somewhat on the limb, and by gently raising the fruit they will easily detach themselves at the proper period. This is an excellent test, and may always be relied on.

Peaches are too frequently gathered before attaining full size, and when this is the case we need not expect good flavor. They must obtain this requisite before gathering; although it is not necessary to delay picking until very mellow.

As a general rule, as small fruits are gathered too early; and, as high color is not a sign of marurity, many experienced fruit growers are misled. Never pick strawberries because they are red, nor blackberries on account of their dark appearance. Each should remain on the plant for some time thereafter. The Albany seedling strawberry changes to a deep crimson hue, and gains continually in size after its first coloring process. It is then soft and excellent eating. And so with blackberries in like manner, many complaining of the extreme tartness when the fault was in gathering imperfect fruit. The Lawton or New Rochelle variety in particular, is delicious eating, if allowed to remain on the plant until soft, when the slightest touch will sever its hold. Strawberries picked with the calyx (or hull) adhering, will always carry better and be less liable to decay than if carelessly pulled without this appendage.

The foregoing remarks in relation to the proper time for gathering fruit are equally applicable to the grape. These generally color long before they are mature; and thus many a novice in fruit culture frequently forms an unjust opinion of his varieties simply from testing unripe specimens. Grapes should always be severed from the vine with strong scissors or trimming shears, and never twisted or broken off.

While most of the large fruits ripen better off than on the tree, Mr. Hoopes very properly accepts the peach. We should make the exception still more emphatic. We were strengthened in our opinion that peaches can only acquire their highest flavor upon the tree by a little experience a few days since. We received from Mr. Bateham, of Ohio, a crate of Hale's Early, a portion of which were considerably mashed, evidently mellow when picked; the remainder retained their form, were but fairly mellow, and were probably hard when gathered. The bruised ones were much the higher flavored, hardly tasting like the same peach.

How to Educate Animals.

To educate animals is not to force their nature, but to tame and direct, so as to make them fit for the service or the society man. Most animals are drawn toward man, whose superiority they recognize by instinct, whom they are proud to please, whose love is agreeable, and whose protection is advantageous to them. But before these relations are established, there is an obstacle to be conquered,—the distrust natural to the lower animals. The first step to be taken, then, is to secure the pupil's confidence.

Unhappily, many do just the contrary of what is necessary to secure this end. Some brutal men know only how to maltreat their animals, which do not obey because they do not understand; other men make playthings of them; and others fatigue them with importune caresses. What an animal demands is security, Never harm him, and you will have his confidence.

When your first relations are established, he will come to be caressed of his own accord, Always be careful of him, but without feebleness or importunity. Never tolerate a vicious act; never allow yourself to be defied; but be indulgent for unintentional disobedience, or for any damage done unintentionally. In these last cases, content yourself with making the animal understand wherein he is wrong, without too much severity. Well-doing should always be rewarded with a caress. In habitual intercourse, be effectionate if you will, but first be reasonable. Do not be lavish of caresses; make them less frequent; but let your rule be gentle, peaceable and just.

Violence and blows are bad means of education for animals as well as men. Force makes itself obeyed, but only on condition of continual action; a sad condition! Besides, in making yourself obeyed by outer force, you drive from the animal all spontaneous action, his grace, his amiability, his arder to obey you, without counting that, in using this means, you reserve for yourself an extreme resource for extreme cruelty.

Your cruel teamsters overwhelm their horses with blows, and oftentimes can scarcely govern them; the Arabs caress theirs, talk to them, live with them, and do with them whatever they wish. For my part, in my relation with animals, I always make it an amusing study to obtain their obedience with the least possible expense.—Translated from Bulletin de Paris.

A Useful Soap.

The following is commended by those who have tried it for scrubbing and cleansing painted floors, washing dishes, and other household purposes: Take two pounds of white olive soap, and shave it in thin slices; and add two ounces of borax and two quarts of cold water; stir all together in a stone or earthen jar, and let it set upon the back of the stove until the mass is dissolved. A very little heat is required, as the liquid need not simmer. When thoroughly mixed and cooled, it becomes of the consistence of a thick jelly, and a piece the size of a cubic inch will make a lather for a gallon of water.

LOCAL ITEMS.

A correspondent of Ziegler's Herald says: On the morning of August 21st one of our estimable neighbors, Mr. James Aiken, and two of his c mpanions were surveying a new road through a portion of our hilly and mountainous county, nevertheless noted for its romantic and picturesque scenery, by the name of Slippery rock. They arrived at a chasm which heretofore seemed almost impossible for human skill to span so that it would answer the purpose of a highway, although there was a foot-path, or rather a foot-log across it, with railing on each side to prevent accident. The width of the chasm was 50 feet, and standing on the log you could look down 150 feet, the sides being covered with rocks and stumps of pine trees scattered here and there and occasionally a large rock jutting out from the side. The footh path had not been in use for a number of years and our friend with that adventurous spirit peculiar to the inhabitants of Butler county, proposed an examination of the bridge or foot-path to see how much of it was solid and fit for further use. Mr. Aiken walked out on the log about 30 feet, when a cry from one of his companions startled him. On looking around he saw a sight that froze his blood and made "each particular hair stand on end." The end of the narrow bridge from which he started, had parted from its fastenings and was swinging in mid-air. The other end of the path had crumbled away. Fully realizing the peril of his position he atttempted to return, but at that instant the timbers parted with a crash and Wr. Aiken with presence of mind almost unequaled, sprang into the air attempting to alight fifteen feet below on one of the projecting rocks. He accomplished it, but rebounding from these he fell 40 feet further with nothing to break the fall except a few pine branches, and alighting on another rock. From there he went crashing through the limbs of a sapling endeavoring vainly to clutch them in his descent. He still fell from point to point until he reached the bottom fully 125 feet from the bridge above. He lay insensible and to all appearance dead. His horrified companions hastily aroused the neighbors and by means of ropes they descended the side of the chasm. After resorting to the usual restoratives he became sufficiently restored to talk. They brought him to the top and after a careful examination, strange to say, not a bone was broken or a mark found on him. At last accounts he was walking around and still continues to count one in the census.

We are informed by Frank Miller of New Lisbon, Ohio, that R H. Dawson, formerly of Ohioville, but now residing in Lewisville, Pottawatomie county Kansas, is a Republican candi late for Recorder, and is likely to receive the nomination, which is in that county equivalent to an election. Mr. Dawson is a young man of good character, smart, energetic, and his many friends will be glad to hear of his success.

Undeveloped Vigor.

The feeble and debilitated usually fancy they are in a more hopeless condition than they really are. The resources of nature are not easily exhausted. Even when strength and appetite fail, when the eyes are heavy and lustreless, the complexion pallid, the nerves tremulous, the body attenuated, and the mind depressed, there is generally a reserve of latent power behind such palpable evidences of weakness. Various modes of treatment are resorted to by physicians in the hope of developing and rendering available this store of sleeping vitality, but the surest, and indeed the only thoroughly safe and reliable means of awakening the dormant energies of the system is a course of Hostetter's stomach Bitters. Electricity, shower baths, the flesh brush, sea bathing, &c., may be well enough in their way, as auxiliaries, but they do not reach the source of the evil. All physical debility proceeds either from a derangement of the functions of the assimilating, secretive and vitalizing rate, or from a sluggish constitution. In either case, and also in cases where both causes exist, the Bitters will invariably produce an immediate and salutary change in the condition of the patient, and eventually effect a complete cure. None of the dangerous alkaloids, too often administered as tonics, can be otherwise than deleterious under such circumstances, and to give mercury is positively criminal. The direct effect of the great vegetable specific will be manifested in an improved appetite, a more cheerful frame of mind, a gradual return of strength an increase of flesh, and a healthier complex on. Meanwhile, however, the constitution, if inert and feeble, will have been roused and renovated by the subtile elements of invigoration contained in the Bitters.

A Telegram received by F. & S. Dorraugh, on Wednesday, states that the oil town of Antwerp, Butler county, is razed to the ground. The well next [illegible] by the Messrs. Dorraugh, was saved but no further particulars [illegible].

Prof. J. Ebert, from Pittsburgh, will take charge of the Musical Department in Beaver Seminary. The Prof. is so well known as one of our best musicians that we deem it not necessary to state his pedigree, or else we might trace his Stammbaum de musigue back to the golden age, claiming Apollo himself a maestro of one of his ancestors.

The Prof. numbers among his pupils more than one, who now excel in their profession, and even his confreres gather around him for instruction. We hope that many of our young people will avail themselves of this opportunity to become really thorough musicians.

Representing the above first class Insurance Companies, acknowledged to be amongst the best and most reliable in the world, and representing a gross cash capital of nearly $16,000,000, I am enabled to make insurance to any amount desired. Applications promptly attended to, and Policies written without delay, and at fair rates and liberal terms. Losses liberally adjusted and promptly paid. INSURE TO-DAY! By one year's delay you may lose the savings of years. Delays are dangerous, and life uncertain; therefore, Insure to day! "One to-day is worth two to-morrows." Quality, also, is of the utmost importance. The low priced, worthless article, always proves the dearest. The above companies are known to be among the best and wealthiest in the world. "As ye sow that shall ye reap."

Grateful for the very liberal patronage already bestowed, I hope—by a strict attention to a legitimate business—not only to merit a continuance of the same, but a large increase the present year.

Mr. Stephen A. Craig is duly authorized to take applications and receive premiums at Freedom and adjoining townships.
